Dear Parents,

The Derryfield Middle School is pleased to provide you and your student(s) with an optional summer reading list. Many parents and students ask us for suggested reading over the summer. This list includes a variety of books from all genres. It is also a list for our entire middle school, from sixth grade through eighth grade, from average readers to more advanced readers. Some of the novels on the list will be more appropriate for sixth graders, while others will be more suitable for eighth graders. Similarly, some of the novels are more challenging and complex than others, some with themes about difficult issues.

We encourage you to use this list to help you start your reading search. For those of you who like to monitor your child's reading, we encourage you to research some of these titles a little more to make sure you are comfortable with them. Both Common Sense Media and Goodreads are good resources, as well as your local public library. We hope that you will read alongside your child(ren) this summer, as this provides some excellent opportunities for intellectual growth and development.

We would like to take this opportunity to extend our best wishes for an enjoyable summer. Happy reading!

Sincerely,

David Baroody and Jodie Leen

“Young readers are asking for substance. They are asking for respect. They are asking for books that challenge, and confirm and console. They are asking for us to listen to their questions and to help them find their own answers.”

—Karen Hesse, Newbery acceptance speech, Horn Book, September/October 1998
